The Democrats in Wisconsin and many other States are still having a vacation. They will have nothing to do this fall but stand with arms folded and see the Republicans gather in the offices.

James Malley will be tried for the murder of John Cramer, and the trial will probably be one of the most sensational and costly, ever known in Connecticut. The Rev. Mr. Haydon's trial, who was charged with killing Mary Stannard two years ago last month, cost the State of Connecticut $60,000, and at last the jury disagreed, and the second trial has not been held.

The Chicago Journal has added another candidate to the already long list for Governor in this State. Lieutenant Governor Bingham has never been a candidate in the general sense of that term. Of course he would accept the nomination if tendered him, and be very thankful for it, but he has not by word or action given his friends to understand that he is an avowed candidate. But the Chicago Journal places him among the most prominent of those who have been mentioned and endorses his candidacy in strong language. In summing up the whole matter the Journal says: "He is an able lawyer, whose legal attainments have attracted public attention outside of his State, a good campaigner and an honest man."

As the time approaches for holding the Republican convention, the interest in the result increases, and candidates multiply. The outlook is that the Republicans will have an exciting time. There are two or three very strong candidates for nearly every place on the ticket, and this fact will add interest and excitement to the scene in the convention. The Democrats hope to reap some benefit from what they call inharmonious in the Republican party on the question of candidates. But all there is of that hope will be blasted. The Republican party of Wisconsin is just in that condition now that it doesn't propose to surrender or fritter away a single point of advantage it has over the Democrats. While there may be differences of opinion now as to who shall be nominated for State officers, there will be no difference of opinion after the convention as to who should be elected.

The first time that ever a "religious" play was put upon the stage in the United States, was that attempted by the New York Union Square theatrical company. It is a new departure—a very great departure in the dramatic line. The name of the play is "Daniel Roebuck." It is a "sterling drama," and is magnificently played. The "Passion Play," which had such a run in Germany, was too revolting to the church people of this country, and its production in New York was prevented by a powerful public sentiment rising against it. The play of "Daniel Roebuck" fully meets the wants of the religious element in this country. It is a conflict between Reason and Faith, atheism being represented by that brilliant young actor, Charles R. Thorne, and religion by the accomplished and sterling Miss Jewett. Those who are accustomed to about theaters may suppose that such a play would not find a paying business, but the play is so good and its production so admirable, that with the thermometer in the nineties in Chicago, the Grand Opera house was packed for two weeks with as intelligent audiences as ever assembled in that city. The people did not tire of it, and during every production, the applause fairly shook the building. The Union Square company is to be sincerely thanked for bringing out such a play and for putting it upon the stage in a manner which creates universal applause among the religious element in this country.

There is singular condition of things existing in Indianapolis. A report from that city, says, "God and morality reigns, and the gospel is without a rival on the Lord's day." This state of affairs is the result of an intense agitation by the prohibitionists, the churches, and a certain portion of the secular press. The fight was begun against the saloon keepers, and losing sight of the fact that there were large business interests at stake, the prohibitionists drove the dealers to the wall. The liquor element saw that the popular feeling was against them, and they surrendered, but not without their eyes open. There was other business being carried on on Sunday which the statutes prohibited, and on the principle that the law is no respecter of person, the friends of the liquor element were determined that other business should also pay respect to the law, and steps were taken to enforce it. The mayor and the police force had their attention called to the Sunday laws, and when this was done, the police board directed the policemen to enforce all laws against the desecration of the Sabbath without fear or favor, save newspapers, druggists filling prescriptions, milkmen, and hotels. When the laws were thus enforced, there arose a general howl, and the judicial officers have been overrun with petitions to exempt certain ones from restrictions, because their business was suffering a severe loss, and among the number of petitions were many who rose up in arms against the liquor element. When their own or was gored they did not want any Sunday law. The saloon-keepers seemed to enjoy the situation very much, and the enforcement of the Sunday law was making it odious. It has closed up a good many places of business on Sunday which should never have been permitted to keep open on that day, and in that respect has done good. An attempt will be made to stop freight trains, switch engines, street cars, and milk wagons. They may go so far as to create a riot and make the last of the condition of the city worse than the first.

THE PRESIDENT.

SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.
WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The Presidential train left at 6:30 o'clock, the President was feeling well, and waived his hand as he left the White House. His pulse decreased from 100 to 95. No sound broke the stillness of the gray dawn, as the funeral-like procession moved through the streets. Mrs. Garfield and her daughter were driven rapidly to the train prepared for the reception of the patient.

BALTIMORE, 8 a. m.—The Presidential train just passed without stopping. The forty miles from Washington was made in eighty minutes.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 6.—The Presidential train arrived at 1 p. m., much of the distance being made at the rate of a mile a minute. Dr. Hamilton came down from New York at 10 o'clock with three carloads of United States infantry and stationed them about the Elberon depot and the Franklin cottage to keep back the crowd. The President stood the trip splendidly. His pulse is now 110. A good breeze is blowing.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 6.—The cabinet left at 10 a. m. for Long Branch.

THE PRESIDENTIAL TRAIN.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 5.—President Robert's private car 120, two sleepers, and a baggage car will complete the train for the President. The private car will carry President Garfield and the members of his cabinet. The others will be devoted to the physicians, General Swain, Mr. and Mrs. Rockwell, and possibly one or two members of the cabinet.

Locomotive 653, which will carry the train, arrived from Jersey City last night in charge of Engineer W. H. Page, who has been on the road since 1853, and has the reputation of being one of the most reliable men in the company's employ. She has a five foot six inch cylinder and twenty-four inch stroke. She was built in 1875, and has engaged in carrying the fast mails from Jersey City to Pennsylvania.

TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Sept. 5.—A special dispatch to the Nonpareil from Shenandoah, Iowa, gives the following particulars of a terrible accident which occurred near that place this afternoon:

Passenger train No. 91, northbound on the Wabash road this afternoon, was derailed five miles west of this place about 3 o'clock. Nineteen persons were more or less injured, and one, named Thomas C. Leacock, was killed outright. Two or three others will probably die.

It is simply marvelous how quickly constipation, biliousness, sick headache, fever and ague, and malaria, are cured by "Sellers' Liver Pills."

THE INDIAN MASSACRE.

Another Account of the Massacre by the White Mountain Indians—Not as Had as Reported.

TROON, A. T. Sept. 5.—A citizen has received the following:
CAMP THOMAS, Sept. 5.—Lieutenant Stanton, of the Sixth cavalry, with thirty-three men as an escort, reached here from Camp Apache last evening about seven o'clock, with a dispatch as follows:

FORT APACHE, Sept. 1.—General Carr, colonel of the Sixth cavalry, left here August 29th with troops D and E, of the Sixth cavalry, and a company of Indian scouts—105 men and six officers—intending to arrest the Apache medicine men who have been endeavoring to get the Indians to break out. He reached Cibola creek, forty-five miles west of here at 3 p. m. on the 30th.

They found 633 Indians camped there, and arrested a medicine man without resistance. The command then went a few miles from the Indian village and camped, and the pack train was unloaded, while the Indians began arriving from every point, but keeping along the range of the bluff, some 500 yards off.

Some Indian scouts having at this time left their own camp and came into our camp, Captain Hentig ordered them to leave. While doing so an Indian turned and fired and killed Captain Hentig instantly. The light then became general. The troops formed in skirmish line, driving the Indians back some distance. The herders were killed by the first volley, and the herd stampeded.

The light began at 4 o'clock and lasted nearly three hours, until darkness, when the Indians drew off toward their own camp. It is impossible to tell how many hostiles were killed. A council was held, and it was decided that it was impossible to hold the position against such a large force. There was but one way out of the camp, through Bad Canon. The herd was rounded up, and it was found that D troop had lost thirty-three horses and E troop eight pack horses, seven mules, and several badly shot. They hastily gathered up the dead and found seven men and an officer, Captain Hentig, killed.

They buried them inside the tent of Carrs, which, with everything but saddles and ammunition, was left on the field as a blind to cover the retreat. Three badly wounded soldiers were placed on horses. At 11 o'clock the command started on the retreat for this post. One of the wounded men died at 4 o'clock the next morning. The Indians did not follow, evidently thinking them still at Cibola. General Carr made a forced march, not stopping anywhere until he reached this post at 4 p. m. on the 31st.

The troops were badly used up with hunger and fatigue. The hostiles are swarming through the country and came within a mile of this post. This morning they burned several buildings, and stamped a large herd of cattle, and then drew off to the mountains.

Couriers who started out were killed within thirty miles of here, and several more out on escort duty, besides four citizens. This is reported by a friendly Indian spy.

The Mormon settlers north of us must be suffering heavily. We can do nothing but hold the post until reinforcements reach us. The Indians cut the telegraph lines every few miles.

Later: At 2 o'clock the Indians began firing into the party at the graveyard burying the dead, and drove them into the post. Then they fired into the post from the bluff from every side. The troops formed a skirmish line around the entire camp, keeping them out of the post. The light lasted until dark, when the Indians drew off. Captain Gordon, successor to Captain Hentig, was wounded in the leg. There were no other casualties. The firing during the first hour was very heavy from the hostiles. We believe we can keep them out of the post, but no more.

Sept. 2, 10 a. m.—We still hold the fort. The fight yesterday was very warm for about two hours. We have sent messages by couriers—Corporal Wagner on the night of the 12th, and Private Welsh, on the 13th, on the 14th, and by Owens, the mail-carrier, at noon of the 31st. Welsh is the only one who has reached Thomas. He started on his return on the morning of September 1, and has not been heard from since.

SERIOUS RIOTS.

Serious and Bloody Riots in the Streets of Limerick.

LIMERICK, Sept. 5.—There have been further riots during the morning. The soldiers who marched upon George street were stoned. They then charged the mob, dispersing it in all directions. During the riots yesterday there was no resident magistrate with the police, and the riot act was not read. The disturbance was caused by some soldiers making insulting remarks about the Pope. The police fired upon some persons throwing stones, and fifteen were wounded some dangerously. The opinion is freely expressed that the police might have kept back the mob without firing.

The Coroner, in spite of the verdict of the jury, refused to sign the commitment against the police officers who shot and killed Hickie.

CORK, Sept. 5.—Subsequent to the George street affray this morning the people armed themselves and attempted to decoy the police from the barracks by means of a false report. Several persons have been killed. The struggle failed, or doubtless there would have been serious bloodshed. A large additional force of constabulary will be sent to Limerick.

QUININE.

NEW YORK, Sept. 5.—A leading pharmaceutical importer here gives as a reason for the depreciation in the price of quinine the discovery within a comparatively few months of what may be called a "bark bonanza" in the district of Santander, United States of Colombia. The indications are that certain parties in New York are working it with extraordinary results. The substance called "unprea," a variety of bark which is copper-colored (hence its name), and very rich in the lower alkaloids. Representatives of the New York drug trade were dispatched to acquaint their principals with the facts as learned by personal observation, and according to authentic reports the precious bark has been put in this market by a single firm to the extent of $1,000,000 and upwards. The result is an overstock and decline in prices. But it is stated that the district yielding this bark is limited and that the supplies cannot hold out beyond six or nine months longer.

Old Zach Chandler as a Boxer.

From the Detroit Free Press.

Zach Chandler was not only a strong man and an expert boxer, but he had the audacity to back his muscle, and it didn't take all day to rile him. Just at the close of the war, and the day before the grand review in Washington, the Senator came out to Washington to visit the Michigan cavalry. The boys were in high spirits, and many of the Sixth were interested spectators of a boxing-match, or, rather, a series of set-toes with the gloves. Zach took his place in the circle unknown to all, and attracted no attention until one of the boxers was driven back upon him. Learning forward the Senator whispered:

"Young man, I saw a dozen good chances for your left in there."

"Say, old coon, maybe you're on the box!" called the other, as he overheard the remark.

Zach peeled off his alpaca coat, put on his boxing gloves, and took the gloves from the one who had just been worsted. The other man was the best boxer in the regiment, and there was intense excitement as the two squared off. Not a pass was made for a minute, and then the Senator found on opening, and sent a left-hander so straight and solid that his opponent went down like a log. He got up slowly and in a dazed condition, and removing the gloves from his hands approached the Senator and asked:

"Say did you hit me with a brick hospital?"

"No I struck with this," replied Zach, as he held out his left.

The man surveyed it, felt of it, ran his hand up and down the Senator's arm, and turned to the boys and said:

"That settles me. I prefer the brick hospital!"

Just too Horribly Awful.

"Oh, you've no idea how cruel the Washington authorities are," said a Washington lady to a Brooklyn girl yesterday afternoon. "All my girls went to the different horticultural gardens, and got flowers for poor children, and we made a pie, and they wouldn't let us give them to him."

"The horrid wretches!" exclaimed the Brooklyn girl, "and he such a great criminal!"

"Yes indeed, and we wanted to carpet his cell and put some pictures on the walls, but do you know the awful authorities wouldn't even give him the sponge cake we sent him!"

"What an outrage! When poor, dear Christine Cox was to be hung in the Tombs I went every day, and got my name in the paper three times."

"Oh my! how fortunate! We have tried everything to get at poor Mr. Guiteau, and I suppose we'll have to get out a warrant from the Supreme Court to let him have the smoking op we made for him. It's just horrid. Everything about him is printed in the papers, and we're just dying to be with him. The only thing that consoles me is that the President is going to get well, and poor Mr. Guiteau may not be hung after all. Of course, we don't care anything about a man who is only going to jail but if he is hung I should never forgive our government for sending back that sponge cake so long as I live. Got any great criminals in Brooklyn?"

"Only one, and his case is on appeal. Isn't it a shame?"

"Perfectly, terribly, horribly awful! Isn't there some place we can get ice cream for ten cents a plate?"

They got it and the lamentations continued ad lib.

To Remove Fruit Stains.

From the American Agriculturist.

In the season of fruits, the napkins used at table, and often the handkerchiefs and other articles, will become stained. Those who have access to a good drug store can procure a bottle of Javelle water. If the stains are wet with this before the articles are put into the wash they will be completely removed. Those who cannot get Javelle water can make a solution of chloride of lime. Four ounces of the chloride of lime is to be put into a quart of water in a bottle, and after thoroughly shaking allow the drops to settle. The clear liquid will remove the stains as readily as Javelle water, but in using this one precaution must be observed. Be careful not to thoroughly rinse the article to which this solution has been applied in clear water before bringing it in contact with soap. When Javelle water is used the precaution is not necessary, but with the chloride of lime liquid it is, or the articles will be harsh and stiff.

Madam Dockrill, the famous rider, whose achievements Mr. Barnum advertises with so many adjectives, is the wife of the director of the circus, and the mother of two children. Her father is a circus manager in England and she was practically brought up under a tent. Her courage and perseverance must be wonderful, as she has suffered accidents enough to discourage even a brave woman from such perilous employment. Once when only 14 years of age, while performing before Emperor Napoleon III, her horse was frightened by a basket of flowers thrown to her from the royal box, and she was thrown to the ground, having several ribs fractured. The next year, in 1865, her left leg was broken at St. Petersburg during a performance, and in 1866 at the same place, her horse fell while she was riding, and she was thrown twenty-four feet into the air, and fracturing several ribs. Two years later, at Paris, while trying to do her six-horse act, she was thrown, and her left arm was stopped upon by one of the animals and broken. In 1872 she lost her right leg and narrowly escaped with her life at the burning of the Hippodrome at New York. Her last accident occurred at Chicago in 1879, when her horse whirled and threw her dislocating her ankle; but, after all this bruising and breaking of bones, she will do it. The Madam is a very devout Catholic.

Two or three years ago a Lewiston barber, who had been industrious and prudent, closed his shop here and went to Boston with savings in his pocket amounting to a considerable sum. He speculated in stocks and at one time he became the owner of $50,000, and was rolling in luxury. He lost all in the same way it was made. To-day he is "dead broke," and working in a barber-shop at the rate of $2 a day.—Lewiston Journal.

A SMILE FOR HOME.

"Take that home with you, my dear," said Mrs. Lewis, her manner half smiling, half serious.

"Take what home, Caddy?" said Mr. Lewis, turning towards his wife curiously.

Now, Mrs. Lewis had spoken from the moment's impulse and already partly regretted her remark.

"Take what home?" repeated her husband; "I don't understand you."

"That smiling face you turned upon Mr. Edwards when you answered his question just now."

Mr. Lewis slightly averted his head and walked on in silence. They had called at the store of Mr. Edwards to purchase a few articles and were now on their way home. There was no smile on the face of Mr. Lewis now, but a very different expression instead—grave almost to sternness. The words of his wife had taken him altogether by surprise; and though, spoken lightly, had settled upon his ears.

Mr. Lewis, like many other men, was in the habit of bringing home, and too often, a clouded face.

Mrs. Lewis was already repenting. Her husband was sensitive to a fault. He could not bear even an implied censure from his wife; and so she had learned to be very guarded in this particular.

Block after block was passed and street after street crossed, and still there was no change in them.

"What then, Caddy?"

Mrs. Lewis started at the sound of her husband's voice, breaking unexpectedly upon her ear in a soft-voiced tone.

"What then?" he repeated, turning toward her, and looking down into her shyly upturned face.

"It would seem happiness through the whole house," said Mrs. Lewis, her tones all trembling with feeling.

"You think so?"

"I know so. Only try it, dear, for this one evening."

"It isn't so easy a thing to put on a smiling face, Caddy, when thought is oppressed with care."

"It didn't seem to require much of you just now," said Mrs. Lewis, glancing at her husband with something of archness in her look.

Again the shadow dropped down upon the face of Mr. Lewis, which was again partly turned away; and again they walked on in silence.

After remaining gravely silent, because he was undergoing a brief self-examination, Mr. Lewis said:

"You thought the smile given to Mr. Edwards came easily enough?"

"It didn't seem to require an effort," replied Mrs. Lewis.

"No, not much effort was required," said Mrs. Lewis.

"But this must be taken into the account; my mind was in a certain state of excitement or activity that repressed sober feelings and made smiling as easy a thing. So we smile and are gay in company at the cost of a little effort, because all are smiling and gay, and we feel the common sphere of excitement. How different it is when we are alone! I need not say. You, Caddy, are a society girl, and you smile as well as I." Mr. Lewis spoke with a tender reproach in his voice.

"But it is caught from your voice, than you imagine," replied Mrs. Lewis.

"Are you certain of that, Caddy?"

"Very certain. You make the sunshine and shadow of your home. Smile upon us; give us cheerful words; enter into our feelings and interests and there will be no brighter home. A shadow upon your countenance is a veil for me, and the same is true of our children."

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis were now at their own door, where they paused a moment and went in. Instantly on passing his threshold Mr. Lewis felt the pressure upon him of his usual state.

The hue of his feelings began to alter. The cheerful, interested expression put on for those who met him in business intercourse began rapidly to change and a sober brow to succeed. Like most business men, his desire for profitable results was often far in advance of the slow evolutions of trade, and his daily history was a history of disappointments, in some measure dependent upon his restless anticipations. He was not willing to work and wait, as he would have to, and like many of his class, neglected the pearls that lay here and there along his life-path, because the best were inferior in value to those he hoped to find just a little way in advance. The consequence was that, when the day's business was over, his mind fell into a brooding state and lingered over its disappointments, or looked forward with failing hope in the future—because in many things had long been deferred. And so he rarely had smiles for his home.

"Thank you for the words," said he, "I will not forget them."

And he did not; but at once recalled himself, and to the glad surprise of Jennie, Will and Mary, met them with a new face, covered with fatherly smiles, and with pleasant questions in pleasant tones of their day's employments. The changes in his face were in quick transitions. They had not expected a greeting like this, but the response was immediate. Little Jennie climbed into her father's arms. Will came and stood by his chair, answering in lively tones his questions, while Mary, older by a few years than either of the others, leaned against her father's shoulder and laid her white hand softly upon his head, smoothing back the dark hair, just showing a little frost, from his broad, manly temples.

A pleasant group was this for the eyes of Mrs. Lewis as she came from her chamber to the sitting-room, where she had gone to lay off her bonnet and shawl and change her dress.

"Words fitly spoken are like apples of gold in pictures of silver," said Mr. Lewis, speaking to her as she came in.

"What do you mean by that?" asked Mary, looking seriously into her father's eyes.

"Mother understands," replied Mr. Lewis, smiling tenderly upon his wife.

"Something pleasant must have happened," said Mary.

"Something pleasant? Why do you say that?" asked Mr. Lewis.

"You and mother look so happy," replied the child.

"And we have cause to be happy," answered the father, as he drew his arm tightly around her, "in having three such good children."

Mary laid her cheek to his and whispered: "If you are happy, father, it makes us all happy, too."

Mr. Lewis kissed her, but did not reply. He felt a rebuke in her words. But the rebuke did not throw a chill over his feelings; it only gave a new strength to his purpose.

"Don't distribute all your smiles. Keep a few of the warmest and brightest for home," said Mrs. Lewis, who parted with her husband on the next morning. He kissed her, but did not promise. The smiles were kept, however, and evening saw them, though not for the outside world. Other and more evenings saw the same cheerful smiles and the same happy home. And was not Mrs. Lewis a better and happier man? Of course he was. And so would all men be if they would take home with them the smiling aspect they so often exhibit as they meet their fellow-men in business intercourse or exchange words in passing compliments. Take your smiles and cheerful words home with you, husbands, fathers and brothers. Your hearts are dark and cold without them.

FACTS AND FIGURES.

—In the Smithsonian grounds, Washington, 50,000 bedded plants were set out last year.

—The sum of $7,260 was offered for a ram exhibited at the recent sheep show in Australia.

—An average of 2,000 postal cards are daily mailed in this country without address on the face.

—Laborers' wages in Mexico under the railway boom, have advanced from eighteen to forty-three cents per day.

—If a man of 150 pounds weight were as strong in proportion to his weight as a beetle he would be able to move one hundred tons.

—An alligator known to be twenty-two years old was caught recently in a steel trap near Tallapoosa, Ga. He was five feet four inches long, and in 1861 escaped from a pond belonging to Lovi B. Smith.

—The largest pasture in the world is on the border between New Mexico and Texas. The Indian Territory bounded on one side and Colorado on the other. On one side there are forty miles of perpendicular rock fence, and yet it will require 200 miles of fencing to inclose it. The owner, Taylor Mandlin, has sown 1,000 tons of oats. He will feed on it 100,000 head of cattle.

—The load used in sounding from a vessel usually weighs about 14 pounds; but in deep sea soundings a weight of not less than 150 pounds is usually employed. Who has been largely used for a line, as it makes less friction in sinking through the water. With hemp rope a sinker of 800 weight is sometimes 20 minutes in reaching the bottom in 1,500 fathoms of water, so great is the friction of the line.

—The Cologne Gazette, commenting on the yearly gathering of the beet-root sugar industry, remarks that Germany, which last year with 400,000 tons ran Austria with 400,000 tons very close, is likely this year with 580,000 tons to stand first in beet-root sugar countries. Home consumption, however, is rather declining than increasing, and the Cologne Gazette suggests a reduction of duty, as in England and France, to stimulate the consumption.

—A lecture recently delivered by a Passaic miller, Mr. M. F. Patet, B. A., gives a good deal of information about spinning and weaving mills in the Bombay Presidency, India. The first mill was started in 1864, and since that time 32 in all have put in operation 10,000 looms with 1,000,000 spindles, giving employment to 300,000 persons. The total capital invested is about $55,000,000. Besides the Bombay mills there are in all India 18 others, with some 1,800 looms and 240,000 spindles, involving a capital of about $5,000,000. The industry employs in all India an average of 1,000 hands to a mill.

—The most numerous of spindles in one mill is 100,000, the lowest 4,800. The average number of looms in a mill is 240.

WIT AND WISDOM.

—The man who is anxious for something to turn up can be accommodated by putting a glass of water under a top's nose.—Boston Post.

—When a hen sits on an empty China egg, you call it blind instinct. What do you call it when a girl sets her affections on an empty-headed noodle?—Boston Transcript.

—A Kentucky gentleman stole four hives of bees, carried them several miles, and did not get stung once; but if an honest man had gone within ten feet of the bees he would have been stung fifty times.—New Haven Register.

—Some philanthropist has said that a man who truly loves a horse cannot be wicked. He must be in the wrong. Texas falls are full of men who loved other people's horses not wisely, but too well.—N. O. Picayune.

—No'm.

There was an old maiden of Rome
Who very much wanted a home;
So she asked her friend Harry
If he would not marry;
He blushed, and said solemnly, "No'm!"

—Pamphlets describing the attractions at summer resorts should distinctly state whether or not brass bands are kept on the premises. Persons who go to the country for quiet, peace and happiness, should not be misled into neighborhoods where brass bands are allowed to run at large and make night hideous with noise.—N. O. Picayune.

—They were approaching an ice-cream saloon, and she said, "Oh, Charles, I'm going to have my new dress cut bias—Oh—oo. S-p-p-p!—there's an ice-cream saloon, Goody!" "Yes; and it is like your new dress, for it will be cut by us," and the horrid old wretch led the panting damsel across the street.—Whitcomb Times.

—The War Department thinks seriously of abolishing the bayonet, and we feel kind of sorry. Those formidable weapons look so bright and shiny on the parade, and make the troops seem so formidable in the eyes of the fair sex. Besides, they used to toast crackers so nicely in the army and were so handy to poke fires with.—N. J. Commercial Advertiser.

—The following poemlet is excellent of its kind:

"From off the running rivulet the joy came in the dawn,
And the flutter of the violet of the daisies in the dawn;
The quiver of the dandelion in the brooklet we can hear,
And the ripples of the rivulet will presently appear."

night, and frosts in northern sections.

This is to be followed by some rather heavy rain storms during the early part of the week following. Anybody who trusted Vennor and wore a fall overcoat to church last Sunday, or covered their plants with newspapers to keep off the frost, or slept last night under two or three comfortable and a feather bed,

would be just about ready this morning to invade Canada.

The bottomers at the shoe factory who have struck for higher wages, claim that the company is in error in saying that their wages average $35 per week for a team of three men, and that while those who work on men's shoes get the standard rates, as fixed in Chicago, those at work on women's shoes, will not average over $27 a team, or $9 a week per man. They claim that they are under

Chicago prices ten per cent, and want that much of a raise. Another cause of grievance set forth by them is that the work is so graded here that it counts against them. This seems to be about their side of the story.

OBITUARY.

REV. HENRY COWLES, D. D.

A noble life ended this morning, and rest came as a benediction crown to years of earnest work. Rev. Henry Cowles, D. D., is gone, he having breathed his last about half-past seven o'clock this morning, at the Institution for the Blind, whose Superintendent, Mrs. Sarah F. Little, is his daughter. The sad event had cast its shadow before, and it came not without due warning, his health having been poor since last fall, his physical breaking down dating back to a pressure of overwork and to the illness and death of his wife, who passed away last November, at their home in Oberlin, O. Last July in company with his granddaughter, he came to this city, intending to remain at least for the summer with Mrs. Little.

Paralysis had already manifested itself,

and he had lost the control of his lower limbs, and this progressing, he grew gradually feebler in body, though retaining clearness of mind, until the end came.

The deceased was born in Norfolk,

Conn., April 24, 1833, and was therefore in his 79th year. His boyhood was spent in Colbrook, Conn., where the family moved when he was very young. He was prepared for college under the tutelage of Rev. Ralph Emerson, father of Prof.

Emerson, of Hallowell, and entering Yale college graduated at the head of the class of 1856. In 1858 he was licensed to preach, and in July of the same year was ordained as a missionary to Ohio, then almost a wilderness. Here he spent two years in active, earnest work, and then mounting his horse he rode all the way back to Connecticut in the saddle, and there married his first wife, Mrs. Little's own mother, who long since died. Buying a covered buggy, he took his bride and returned, in primitive fashion, to his work in Ohio, settling in Austinburg,

where he remained five years.

In September 1859, he went to Oberlin, which from that time on was his home. He was professor in the college there for about three years, and professor in the theological school for nine years.

During a portion of this time he was also assistant editor of the Oberlin Evangelist, and for sixteen years was its editor in chief, leaving the chair shortly after the beginning of the war.

During these years his pen had been busy and besides many lesser essays and religious periodicals, he published two books, which met with much favor, one entitled, "Holiness of Christians in the Present Life," the other "Gospel Manna."

The great work of his life was that of writing a complete commentary on the Old and New Testament, which has been published in sixteen volumes by Appleton & Co., the concluding volumes being just fresh from the press. In the pro-face to that on Matthew and Mark, he gives an insight into his own purposes and work: "Passing uncounted the years of preparatory study and teaching of the scriptures, and of somewhat special attention to the laws of just interpretation, the years of labor in preparing these notes for the press began with

August, 1863—my age being then sixty.

From that date to the present, this work has been prosecuted with only the least possible diversion to other avocations, and has included several periods of many consecutive months of labor, with no omission of a day. In the entire period of more than seventeen years, there have been not more than ten days in which sickness has compelled me to drop my pen. All this was scarcely worth the mention, save for the occasion

it presents and the demand it makes for the expression of profoundest gratitude
